Greenwich primaries among the best in UK

by Dan Stephens

NINE Royal Greenwich schools have got ten out of ten in national tests for primary schools.

They are now among the top performing schools in the country.

It follows the release of national key stage 2 results for 2013 which reveal that nine local primary schools had 100 per cent of their pupils making at least two levels of progress in reading, writing and maths between key

Council calls for curb on pay day lenders

THE council is getting tough with 'pay day' lenders in its latest bid to tackle poverty in the royal borough.

Royal borough councillors agree the growth of lending companies is exploiting people on low incomes and on benefits.

In a unanimous decision, they called for government action after hearing how lenders can charge massive interest rates of over 1,000 per cent APR on short-term loans.

The council has already asked the government to change the planning rules on betting shops, which can open in town centres without any special planning permission. Pay day lenders fall into the same category and councillors want the government to introduce a separate planning permission status which could help to control the number of pay day lenders in a particular area.

During full council meeting on January 29, councillors welcomed the news that the government wants a new legal cap on the overall cost of pay day loans, including the high charges and fees levied on borrowers on top of interest rates, as a way of protecting vulnerable people.

They also praised the work of credit unions and the Citizens Advice Bureau for giving help to people who might be tempted to go to a pay day lender.

The royal borough already supports a number of initiatives to tackle poverty and help people borrow money - without resorting to loan sharks and high-interest payday lenders.

The council-sponsored Greenwich & Bexley Credit Union is planning to work alongside local housing associations to provide instant loans and budgeting accounts for tenants.

It has also been working with the council on an interest-free loan scheme to provide people with rent deposits in the private sector. It aims to help people who are in need of a home but who are not considered to be high priority.

The council is also backing a new project launched to help young people with their money and prevent them turning to pay

No place to turn to for help with nighttime stray dog

UNFORTUNATELY my family and I came across a stray Staffordshire bull terrier outside the Coop in Charlton. Another person had secured the dog and was unsure of what to do. The dog had many cuts on its body and looked as though it was neglected. We tried to contact the RSPCA and Greenwich Police but to no avail. No services would take the dog. It was now 9.30 at night and we were very concerned that we would have to keep the dog overnight even though we did not know anything about its history. Then someone suggested the dog warden so we tried the number but the offices were closed! Fortunately a kind person in the Coop gave us the PDSA number in Thamesmead.

The dog was very aggressive towards other dogs and the vet confirmed its injuries were probably the result of dog fighting. I can only imagine what it could have done to a family dog if we had not taken it to the PDSA. I strongly feel that Greenwich Council needs to provide a 24 hour dog warden service for stray dogs before another animal or person is hurt.

Pam Cameron, Charlton

● Thank you for bringing this issue to our attention. The royal borough is committed to reducing incidents and accidents involving dogs and in 2009 introduced Dog Control Orders. The royal borough also holds regular events to encourage responsible dog ownership, with a number coming up in March please check your copy of GT in coming weeks.

Cinema will be great for Eltham

THE proposed new cinema on Eltham High Street on the site of the old Co-op store - now Poundland - will be good for Eltham and other business on the High Street.

It will also bring more trade in the evenings and weekends to the bars and restaurants and this is what our town centres need to help them survive in the future.

Graham Justine, Blackheath

Correction

Our story headlined 'Rosen Shine' (p8 Jan 28) said that South Rise primary was in Thamesmead. The school is actually in Plumstead. Apologies for the mistake.

Deadline for Tall Ships stewards

THERE'S just a few days left for people to apply to become volunteer stewards for Royal Greenwich's spectacular Tall Ships event in September. Seventy people have already come forward to be trained as uniformed guides, helping visitors find their way around the ships that will be moored on the riverside from September 5 to 9.

The regatta will see a festival atmosphere in Greenwich with a parade by the crews, prize-giving for the best and youngest sailors, and a free firework display. There will also be the chance to go aboard the tall ships when they are at their moorings. On the Tuesday all the ships will leave together for a parade of sail down river.

People have until Friday (February 14) to apply to be a volunteer steward. To be eligible, they need to live, work or study in the borough. Recruitment and training is taking place at the Volunteer Centre in Greenwich. It covers customer service, dealing with the public and helping them if they have problems, role playing and having an interview.

● To apply, go to www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/tallships/volunteer, and for more information on what the role involves please contact tallships@volunteersgreenwich.co.uk

Royal borough in ongoing discussions with the Army

THE council is in ongoing talks with the Army about an appropriate way to remember murdered soldier Lee Rigby.

A spokesperson for the royal borough said: "Since the day of Lee Rigby's tragic death, the council has been overwhelmed by interest in a local memorial for Lee Rigby and we appreciate public feelings about this tragic murder.

"Contrary to some newspaper reports, the Royal Borough of Greenwich has not refused any request for a memorial.

"From the outset, the council has determined to work with and through the Army which Lee loved and through which he served his country and gave his life. Given the Army's historic role in the history of our town it does not make sense to do otherwise.

"The Army has been our link to Lee's family and we will continue to work through and with them in managing this still painful and raw matter.

"We will consider requests through the Army, but would expect the Army to be the first port of call for those wishing to propose memorials."

Call to control pay day lenders day lenders in desperation. The Money House is aimed at 16-24-year-olds who will learn how to cope with their finances from experts so they can live independently without getting into money difficulties.

Cllr Denise Hyland, the royal borough's cabinet member for regeneration, enterprise and skills, said: "The current system is failing by allowing local families on low or no earned income of their own, to become reliant and then crippled by excessive debts.

"In many parts of the borough, families continue to struggle on low incomes or exist on out of work benefits. It is no coincidence that we see the spread of pay day lenders, as with betting shops, in areas which include pockets of deprivation. So although we welcome the efforts so far to cap fees associated with these loans, we know that more needs to be done to ensure that local people do not have their futures blighted because they are crippled with debt."

Nurse sentenced to community order for housing fraud

A NURSING officer has been ordered to carry out 180 hours of community service and to repay the royal borough after admitting housing fraud.

The action followed an investigation by the royal borough fraud officers.

Fatmata Mansaray, 39, admitted the charge and was sentenced by Bexley magistrates on January 27.

She was also told to pay £500 to the council and legal costs of £200.

The court heard how she had obtained a two-bedroom flat from the royal borough after declaring, in January 2012, that she was living with her daughter in one room in privately rented accommodation in Eltham.

Borough investigators found that Mansaray had not been renting a room at the Rochester Way address, but in fact had owned the three-bedroom house since 2004.

Interviewed under caution by council officers, she admitted owning the property at the time of accepting a flat from the royal borough, but said her husband paid the mortgage and she was his tenant.

She was charged with two offences under the Fraud Act 2006 and, appearing at Bexley Magistrates' Court on January 13, pleaded guilty.

On January 27 she apologised for her actions and received her sentence.

The borough made a claim for financial losses caused by having to provide emergency accommodation to those in genuine need as it was not able to use the property that Mansaray had obtained.

Cllr Steve Offord, cabinet member for housing said: "In the last few years the royal borough has increased its procedures for preventing this type of fraud and new detection methods are now being used to full affect.

"This successful case is another example of the good work now being undertaken and sends a strong message to those who set out to defraud us of our valuable housing stock that 'you will get caught'."

Royal Artillery band bids Woolwich a musical farewell

HUNDREDS of people took to the streets last Sunday (February 9) to see the Royal Artillery Band marching out of Woolwich Barracks for the last time. The band is moving to Tidworth in Wiltshire, ending an association with Woolwich that goes back more than 250 years, in which time they have played all over the world. The changes are part of a restructuring initiative by the Ministry of Defence.

Sunday afternoon saw band members past and present performing in General Gordon Square. The Mayor of the royal borough, Cllr Angela Cornforth was in attendance and marked the occasion by honouring members of the band with medals on behalf of the royal borough.

She said: "Woolwich and the Army have a close, shared history spanning 300 years and it was a privilege to be present as they marched out for the last time.

"It's fitting that the band should have its last farewell with local people and I'd like to thank those who attended for supporting them."

stage 1 and key stage 2. The schools, which were among only 5 per cent of the country's primary schools to achieve this, were: Bannockburn, Brooklands, Ealdham, Greenslade, Hawksmoor, Morden Mount, Sherington, South Rise and St Thomas a Becket.

Sherington was also praised by the schools minister for being amongst the country's top 250 performing schools for a high level of success in the attainment and progress of disadvantaged pupils by the end of key stage 2.

Mr Laws personally praised the excellent performance of pupils and congratulated staff, governors and students in a letter sent to the school in Charlton.

Acting headteacher Karen Dennett said: "We have always prided ourselves on the progress that all of our children make. We are particularly proud that we have been very successful in raising the attainment also of our disadvantaged pupils and we continually strive to close the attainment gap. At Sherington we foster a culture where every child is encouraged to aspire, strive and achieve."

Five other schools were recognised for the progress made by their disadvantaged pupils who had made two levels of progress in reading, writing and maths. They were Holy Family, Meridian, Our Lady of Grace, St. Peter's and Windrush.

David Ashley, headteacher at Greenslade said: "I am extremely proud of the achievements of our children and of the amazing progress they have made. These outcomes reflect the hard work and commitment of our children and staff as well as the wonderful support we get from our families. Greenslade is a great place to learn."

Sophie Powell, headteacher at South Rise Primary School in Plumstead said: "The school has achieved this exceptional progress by creating a rich and stimulating curriculum founded on core values, for example perseverance, the recruitment of highly skilled teachers and above all a core belief that every child should be supported in achieving their full potential, hence our school vision statement: learning that anything is possible."

Cllr Jackie Smith, cabinet member for children and young people said: "I'm delighted that so many of the royal borough's primary schools have deservedly been recognised for achieving outstanding results and progress between key stage 1 and 2."

"The fact that many of our schools have been praised by the Minister of State for Schools is testament to the hard work of staff and pupils and I'd like to congratulate them on this achievement."

Pavement trade survey

Street licence scheme review

THE council wants to know what people think about its licensing scheme for traders who want to expand their businesses on to the pavement.

by Dick Townsend-Smith

Royal Greenwich was among the very last London boroughs to introduce a licensing scheme in a bid to encourage traders to expand their trade while protecting passers-by like mums with prams or wheelchair users from the hazards of café or restaurant tables and chairs, or stalls on the pavement.

In line with other boroughs Greenwich asked businesses to pay a fee if they wanted to trade from the pavement.

Now the council wants to know how the scheme is working, and what people affected think about it.

It launched a feedback survey on Friday (February 7) which will run for six weeks until March 21.

Letters are going out to residents who live near the licensable pavement trading sites, the businesses themselves, the highways authority, and groups representing affected groups, such as disabled people. Views are wanted on what people think is the best way forward for the scheme.

Questions in the consultation include whether people think there should be a flat rate for a licence, or whether it should be based on the amount of space used, or whether certain businesses should pay more – or be exempt altogether.

At the moment, businesses which want to carry out trading on the street must apply for a permit, and pay a fee. It works out at £7 a week for the first square metre and half that for each subsequent square metre. The council's street trading team makes site inspections and helps people complete their application form. The current scheme remains in place pending the outcome of the council consultation.

A copy of the proposed Orders and other documents, including a map, giving more detailed particulars of the Orders, speed cushions and pedestrian crossing are available for inspection during normal office hours, until the end of six weeks from the date on which the Orders are made or, as the case may be, the Council decides not to make the Orders, at the Directorate of Regeneration, Enterprise and Skills, Strategic Transportation, Royal Borough of Greenwich, The Woolwich Centre, 15 Wellington Street, WRO.

The Big London ENERGY SWITCH

A scheme to help Londoners get a better deal on their gas and electricity bills

Are you paying too much for your gas and electricity?

How does the scheme work?

- The Big London Energy Switch is a collective switching scheme being run by the Royal Borough of Greenwich and a number of other councils in London
- By gathering together a large number of people who want to lower their gas and electricity bills the Big London Energy Switch, using a third party 'switching provider', can encourage energy companies to offer their lowest prices
- Once registration is closed, all the energy companies are invited to offer their best prices to everyone who registered

- You will then receive details of exactly how much money you could potentially save by switching if you accept the offer
- You can choose to accept the offer or not
- Almost 1,800 Greenwich residents registered for the Big London Energy Switch in November, with 66% of registrants able to save money, and an average saving of £130 per year for those households that could save.

To find out more or to register go to www.biglondonenergyswitch.org.uk or call 020 8921 5100

The deadline for registration is 17th February 2014

WITH so many ways to learn to cycle and with many routes to explore, there has never been a better time to learn to cycle. IAN LAMONT looks at what's on offer CYCLISTS of all ages have never had more opportunities to learn to cycle in the royal borough, whatever their cycling ambitions.

Whether people want to end up racing, riding to work or just exploring the many cycle routes around the borough, there are a number of ways to learn.

Adults can just turn up to courses at the Royal Arsenal at weekends, where equipment is provided. The courses, which have been running for eight years meet national standards.

But the royal borough also goes the extra mile for those with specific aims with its 1-2-1 training, offering one instructor to one rider.

This service can be used by complete beginners or experienced cyclists and at times and locations which suit them and mostly involves training at a person's house or nearby park. In the past this was just available to more experienced cyclists, but is now open to beginners.

Cycle trainers can accompany residents on their way to work, or perhaps the local shops, showing residents the safest routes and offering tips on skills and staying out of danger on two wheels.

One person who took advantage of that personal service is Jackie Tones, who decided she needed help commuting between her home in West Thamesmead and her work in Covent Garden.

Her journey is about 12 miles and takes just under an hour. She had an accompanied commute with a borough trainer in December, then did further sessions in January around Woolwich, focusing on the roundabout under the A2 flyover, near The O2 arena where, she noted, cyclists could struggle in a heavily used area.

WHEEL START YOU OFF: Adults on the Saturday courses ride round the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, on free cycling courses

Jackie said: "I have been commuting to work on my bike for two years, but after the recent spate of cyclist deaths in London I decided I needed to do something to try to keep me safer on the road."

She came across a weblink to the royal borough's cycle safety team.

"I never expected that 1-2-1 sessions would be on offer for no cost," said Jackie. "I was accompanied on my commute one morning and given tips about how to position myself better on the roads and at junctions to minimise the likelihood of being involved in an accident. Some of the safety tips are really the opposite of what you think you should be doing. It was really good to have the 'cyclist blackspots' pointed out to me, and has heightened my awareness

'I'm not too old to become proud of myself'

FORMER teacher Caroline Hall set herself the target of finding a new challenge every year when she retired.

The Cambridge Harriers Athletics Club member found she was no longer able to keep up in the sprints.

So when she saw an advert in GT for cyclists stating 'no lycra, no experience' she thought it was exactly what she was looking for.

Two years on from joining the Limited Edition group's Fit Club, the 65-year-old is now hoping her application will be accepted for Ride 100 - cycling a hundred miles in a day starting and finishing in London and taking in Olympic routes in Surrey.

"To be able to cycle past Buckingham Palace and other places in my own city, well I really would be proud," she said "I'm not too old to be proud of myself!"

Her journey to becoming a serious cyclist began with simple steps at the Fit Club. Now she "puts something back" by leading sessions and rides out into the countryside - and her family knows Sundays are "sacrosanct" to her cycling.

The Blackheath resident, said: "I've always been involved in sport of some kind - such as yoga, swimming or athletics. It got to a point where I couldn't do the sprints any more, so I needed to find something else to do.

"I used to do swimming on a Sunday morning at the Waterfront. One day I came out and three cyclists had stopped for a breather. They said they were doing the London to Brighton the following week and I thought I wouldn't mind doing a long ride."

Responding to an advert, she signed up for Fit Club in February 2011.

"I met some lovely people, who were so kind and helpful and supportive. At that time, cycling to Danson Park, which was 15 or 20 miles, seemed an awful long way. They give you wonderful advice on things like how to position yourself. I was wondering why I was wobbling at traffic lights and they told me you need to slow down through the gears as you approach them."

A new world opened up, of countryside places around the borough and beyond, stretching to places such as Westerham, in Kent, inspiring Caroline to help out at the club.

"I've had so much from the people there I thought I should give something back," she said. "So I've led some of the rides - at my age it's not going to be a very fast pace."

Cycling strategy

The royal borough consulted on its draft cycling strategy at the end of 2013. It discussed building new cycle routes, how to encourage more people to cycle and how to make riding safer. The results of the consultation and recommendations will be presented to the council's cabinet shortly.

at those junctions.

"I am definitely a savvier, safer cyclist and I would recommend any cyclist to do the same, regardless of experience. It is a fantastic service that is on offer."

The Saturday sessions, for adults, at the Heritage Centre on the Royal with experience, sessions riding on roads start at 10.30am.

The royal borough also runs Bikeability cycling courses in 64 primary schools for Year 5 and Year 6 pupils.

Cllr Denise Hyland, the council's cabinet member with responsibility for transport, said: "It's great to hear that cyclists of all abilities are making use of the support on offer and I would encourage anybody that wants to ride to join in one of the many training courses on offer."

So where can you get out and ride?

RESIDENTS wanting to plan a cycling leisure trip, perhaps to get out into the country at a weekend, has a range of resources to research their journey.

Royal Greenwich is a great place to cycle through and there are plenty of fantastic routes to try, from short journeys to longer journeys around the borough.

There are a series of London Cycle Network routes connecting different areas of the borough, such as Greenwich to Woolwich, Falconwood and Plumstead, Woolwich to Plumstead or Eltham, Charlton to Abbey Wood, Lee rail station to New Eltham, North Greenwich to Eltham, Eltham to Avery Hill and New Eltham to Thamesmead.

● More details on planning a journey can be found at www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/cycleroutes

● Free maps can be downloaded at www.tfl.gov.uk/roadusers/cycling/11682.aspx

● Ten leisure cycle maps showing short and longer leisure cycle rides around the borough are available on the Greenwich Get Active website's cycling pages at www.greenwichgetactive.com

Each map covers routes taking 40 or 70 minutes. Request a copy by sending an email to info@greenwichgetactive.com.

● The Green Chain has developed 12 circular cycle routes on the South East London Green Chain. Each starts from a train station making them easy to reach.

Most of the routes are traffic free and suitable for beginners and families. They range in distance from 1.6 miles to 7.7 miles.

'Every rider is unique'

EVERY member is unique, is the slogan of Limited Edition Cycling, a club which runs several sessions for residents of all ages and abilities across the royal borough.

The group recently started its fourth 'Fit Camp' for cyclists who are new or returning to the saddle.

Ollie Golding, chair and lead coach of Limited Edition, said:

"We're getting lots of enquiries and run club events several times a week.

"Most of the members come through Fit Camp. Whether they are starting cycling or coming back to it after several years, people can end up going on 40 or 60 mile rides regularly."

An initial 12-week course on Sundays - led by a core rotated group of six leaders - begins with a gentle session around Eltham Park in the first week, when people receive tips on basic skills like stopping.

"Many people are just nervous," explains Ollie. "We talk them through gears, steering and riding safely."

"Then the next week we'll take them out onto a quiet road and get them going past parked cars."

Future weeks will see riders progress to busier routes and longer ones - it is simply a matter of building confidence, for many - who then go on to take on bigger challenges.

"People realise they can cycle and during the course of the sessions they talk to others and share their experiences. When one person does something others think 'I could do that' and it has a very positive effect."

"People decide to cycle to work or they go on 40 or 60-mile rides which they would never have thought of doing when they started."

Now, the group has started a scheme aimed at riders with disabilities and their families.

The unique project is run in conjunction with Corelli College on Saturdays at 1.30pm. The group has a starter fleet of adult tricycles, child tricycles - two with thoracic support - and hand cycles.

The group caters for several disabilities, from cerebral palsy to attention deficit disorder and autism.

"Some members of the disability scheme have managed to try out for the borough's London Youth Games team," said Ollie proudly.

"Our headline is 'every member is unique'. Everyone is doing it for their own personal reason, some so they can interact with their grandchildren or for health and fitness."

"It's lovely to see when people end up in a social group as well."

Courses are run several times a year and it is hoped they could be combined in the summer months, so that cyclists of different abilities can move swiftly between groups.

Partnership to produce hat trick of new performances

GREENWICH Theatre's reputation for supporting emerging theatre companies has led to a formal partnership with the Sell A Door Theatre Company.

Originally a small group of artists studying at the Liverpool Institute for Performing Arts, Sell A Door quickly started to expand its artistic vision to mid-scale touring theatre, and in 2009 relocated itself from Liverpool to its current bases in Greenwich and Stirling. The companies will collaborate in three productions this year.

Sell A Door's artistic director, David Hutchinson, said: "We are delighted to have been made a partner of Greenwich Theatre with its history of producing high quality, diverse productions for local audiences. "The theatre always has time for us and allows us to be innovative."

Their three collaborative productions with Greenwich Theatre this year will start with Robert Louis Stevenson's Kidnapped (April 7-9). Next will be a major revival of Robert Lopez, Jeff Marx and Jeff Whitty's Avenue Q at the theatre (April 23-May 11).

Then, from May 24 to June 1, the theatre will stage an exciting new adaptation of Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland with community performers alongside the professional cast. Greenwich Theatre director James Haddrell said: "Sell A Door is a great example of the work we do in supporting the development of some of this country's finest young companies. The work they produce is infectious and we are delighted to be launching a formal partnership with this Greenwich-based company. With three productions lined up for 2014 this is a strong partnership with a great future."

A BATTERED old hut on a dark, windy common did little to raise expectations. But we followed the light and pressed on through the rain and our efforts were amply rewarded.

Comedy on the Common – a monthly evening of stand-up in Plumstead – was born just six years ago, the brainchild of Nick Wallden and Sarah Williams. "We were lucky" said Nick, "we found just the right person, David Whitney, an actor and local comedian".

A good venue, hard work and some excellent talent saw the fixture completely sold out. It's local, it's funny and the price is just right, all in all, it's a cracking night out.

The comics themselves were varied in style from their content to their tone and delivery. London Hughes (aka Miss London) kicked us off with a confident act, she was brash, she was loud, and she was funny. After her warm up – "Have you ever met a young person called Ethel or a white person called Tyrone?" – her material turned darker and at times she was close to the edge. "Don't tell your kids where you saw me" she ended, "I'm on CBBC all next week!" But she's friendly and warm and this is her time and she's building a formidable style.

Alex Perry was different, more relaxed, less risqué, his material more structured and tight. The resident compere at the Hot and Wild Club in East London, he's been a stand up since 2008. The British 'three-second rule' – a random limit on picking up food off the floor – formed the crux of his act, Greggs' pasties a particular favourite.

Tom Price kept things going in impeccable style, a compere of significant talent. An actor and stand-up, he's quick witted and bright and the hecklers had better beware. Prematurely balding, he compared appointments with his barber with Sunday lunch with his grandma; "My meetings with both are numbered!"

A short intermission for refreshment and snacks and we were back for part two of the show. An aspiring young actress - Hannah Berry George - was next up on stage, the packed crowd now increasingly raucous. But she battled on through it and came out a winner and there's no doubt we'll see more of her later. A writer, a stand up and regular on TV, Tom Craine saw the night off in style. Time Out called him "wonderful", The Observer "very funny" and Plumstead agreed.

So judge not a book by the cover it's wrapped in and pop down to Plumstead next month (February 22). Doors open at 7pm - Nick Revell, Nat Luurtsema, Craig Murray, Trev Tokabi and Aidan McQueen - are on the bill for an 8pm start and the price is £8 on the door.

The welcome is warm and the atmosphere vibrant and the comics remarkably good.

Those in Band C will then be considered in registration date order.

Please note that there will still be some properties with age restrictions so only people of this age group can apply for these.

BAND

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.

Wheels on fire!

WHEELCHAIR football in Greenwich continues to go from strength to strength.

Greenwich Powerchair Football Club remain unbeaten in the national wheelchair football league South division after two rounds of fixtures.

Having won twice in the first set of games late last year, they won another match and drew one in the second round of games in January.

Victories over Brighton II and Essex in December gave them confidence for what was expected to be the toughest round of fixtures, at Surrey University, in the six-team division.

Portsmouth proved hard to break down, with the sides goalless at half-time. Then, in the first minute of the second half, captain Kyle Alexander crossed to Emily Campbell.

She attacked and scored her fifth goal in the division to give Greenwich a 1-0 victory, despite lots of attacking pressure from Portsmouth.

In the second game, Greenwich faced Invicta - and the game could have gone either way. Invicta took the lead, but within minutes Greenwich had got themselves back into the game by gaining an own goal after a corner to level at 1-1, with Shay French-Gibbons forcing the own goal.

In a tight second half, neither side could force a mistake for a winner, leaving Greenwich unbeaten with 10 points in the division after four games, 13 games scored and just one conceded.

Team manager Rhea MacKennon said of the team's success so far: "It is down to the kids through their hard work and determination. They are listening to the coaches and getting out and performing."

The next set of games in the four-a-side sport is in April.

of the night award, assessed by referees and judges.

Reggie is the youngest of four siblings, who are led by Jenna, 18. She is the five-time Amateur Boxing Association champion who will be fighting on her home show bill for Lynn Boxing Club on April 22.

Like Ellis, 15, Jenna is supported by the Starting Blocks Trust, the royal borough's charity which offers financial support to aspiring sporting talent.

Ellis, a gymnast, was ranked number two for her age in the country in 2013.

Third sibling Frank, 14, is also a boxer supported by Starting Blocks. He was South East schoolboys champion in 2013.

Starting Blocks has supported athletes since 2006. Grants for up to £1,250 are available to individuals annually. This year's application deadline is February 20.

Youngest O'Reilly sibling tastes sporting success with first win in boxing ring

Awesome four-some!

MOMENT OF TRUTH: Reggie O'Reilly is announced as the winner of the bout

by Ian Lamont

A FOURTH O'Reilly sibling has made an impact in the world of youth sport.

Reggie O'Reilly kept up the family's sporting success by winning his first ever boxing match in comprehensive fashion.

To top a great night, his prowess was enough to earn boxer of the night at the Nemesis Amateur Boxing show, which featured several bouts.

The mantlepiece in the family home in Eltham is now overcrowded, with glory also to be recognised for his sisters Jenna (boxing), Ellis (gymnastics) and brother Frank (boxing).

Reggie, boxing for Nemesis Amateur Boxing Club on January 31, took on Louis Phillips, from Kensing BC after his first opponent had to pull out.

Phillips had a track record, having won three of his four previous bouts - something his coaches deliberately did not tell him.

His mum Jackie explained: "They thought he could win, but they didn't want him to

panic in any way."

But the Crown Woods College pupil, age 11, proved more than up to the task on his debut, winning all three rounds.

Reggie said: "I was in the middle between confidence and nervous before the bout.

"After I loosened up in the first round I felt like I was winning.

"But after the last round I wasn't sure who'd won. They took a long time to announce the winner."

Learning that his rival had won three previous fights gave him extra confidence for the future, he added.

Reggie, who also plays football, originally went to watch his sister box and then decided to have a go himself and enjoyed it.

In his bout he displayed a tight defence, skillful footwork and brilliant combination of shots, demonstrating skills that would be expected only from much more experienced fighters.
